Attention Business Editors:
^Fire Destroys GWR Core Cutting Building@

VANCOUVER, July 16 /CNW/ - On Wednesday, July 11th, fire destroyed the GWR core cutting facility in Lac La Hache. The fire originated in an adjacent residence, and spread quickly to the core cutting building. The residents were at home when the fire started, and fortunately no one was injured, although the residence is a total loss. Although the core facility was destroyed, the only loss to GWR was the destruction of the core from hole No. AZ-07-18, and approximately 40 feet of the initial core from hole No. AZ-07-21. The core storage racks themselves remain intact, and the core stored in them remains unharmed. All computers were removed safely when the fire broke out, and all the data contained therein was saved. The core facility has already been relocated and the interruption of core cutting and logging will be minimal. By way of further update, drilling is ongoing with two drill rigs and further assay results from these holes and other completed holes will follow in due course.
